

JONES CARRIES OFF BOYS' TENNIS TITLE

Boston Lad Defeats Evans for National Honors in Straight Sets.

RICHARDS IN FINAL ROUND

Advances With Chapin in Junior Championship at Forest Hills.

Arnold W. Jones of Boston won the boys' national championship in the annual tennis tournament yesterday at the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, L. I., by defeating Walter Evans of Montclair, N. J., in the final round in straight sets 6-0, 6-3, 6-4.

The youngsters finished their match early and escaped the rain which came late in the afternoon.

Jones outplayed his rival from every angle of the game right from the beginning. After he had taken the first set at love, however, the Boston boy let up and took things easy for the remainder of the match.

In the junior championship, Vincent Richards of Yonkers and A. H. Chapin, Jr., of Springfield, Mass., moved out to the final round by winning their semi-final matches. Both of these boys had to go four sets to win their victories, and it is coincidental that in the round before the semi-finals they were both defeated by the same player.

The veterans' singles came down to the semi-final round with T. W. Stephens, Clarence Hobart, Fred G. Anderson and L. E. Jones. Stephens and Anderson and Hobart moved up without much trouble, the former on a straight set victory over J. D. E. Jones at 6-2, 6-4 and the latter over J. D. E. Jones at 6-3, 6-4.

But Brooks is none the less feared. He has a reputation for himself on the tennis courts of the world that will stand for all time. He won the British championship in 1907, twelve years ago, and in 1910 he was the champion of the world.

BROOKES TILTS IN 4 SETS

The matches were watched by many who were interested in all forms of athletics, and all agreed that they could not recall a case in any other branch of sports where the enthusiasts had come out so intent upon remaining that they were determined to foot the weather man. Nor did the crowd leave when the rain first started, in spite of the fact that even from the first few drops it proved to be the fainter of a hearted storm.

Some few of the more faint hearted left the stands when the first drops appeared, but they did not go far. The players had not ceased in their contest, and even the timid did not wish to miss anything of the tennis. The rain did not wait much time, however, until it came down in earnest, and then most of the folks left the top of the stands to go underneath them. There were a great many who never left their seats at all, evidently preferring to keep the seats dry.

There is no doubt but that the weather prevented a record breaking crowd from seeing the matches. As it was before the rain started, there were close to 8,000 persons in the stands and bleachers, and practically all of them remained until the rain came. It was an interesting spectacle to see the fans huddled in places in the stands by hundreds while it still was raining, but after the word had been passed that play would be suspended, the crowd began to move.

The Brooks-Tilden match was the real feature of the afternoon, for, like the Johnston-Patterson affair of Friday, it brought out the veterans of the game, and it was a contest between two of the best players in the world, and a younger representative of America. For Brooks is 42 years old and started to play tennis before Tilden was born.

Brooks Still a Star.

But Brooks is none the less feared. He has a reputation for himself on the tennis courts of the world that will stand for all time. He won the British championship in 1907, twelve years ago, and in 1910 he was the champion of the world.

National Championship Singles

FIFTH ROUND. William M. Johnston, San Francisco, defeated Robert Lindley Murray, Niagara Falls, 6-1, 6-3, 6-4.

William T. Tilden 2d, Philadelphia, defeated Norman E. Brooks, Melbourne, Australia, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

Richard Norris Williams 2d, Boston, defeated Maurice E. McLoughlin, Los Angeles, 6-0, 6-3, 6-2.

game of the second set was being played and before the contestants could get off the courts they were drenched. The pronoun here refers to the players, but the courts were drenched as well before the match began.

It is still a question whether or not the rain did not benefit Tilden more than it did Brooks. Certainly Brooks was not tired and he had spent his time in the second set, chasing Tilden all over the courts and Tilden might not have been able to do anything but necessary for him to go right on with the third set.

Many might have been led to the belief that the rain would have benefited Brooks because of his great ability to shoot back low balls. Ordinarily that might have been true. But against Tilden it was not true, for Tilden would have played the ball low anyway, for that is his style, and he had not departed from it for an instant in either of the first two sets.

In the fourth set Johnston scored 131 points. Of these he gained 42 on aces by placement, 4 on service aces and 84 on aces by placement. Tilden scored a total of 107 points. The champion made 42 aces by placement, 5 service aces and 60 on Johnston's errors.

The fact that Murray made more errors than Johnston, however, was not the reason why the champion was any wider than the Californian, but that Johnston continually pulled him out of position.

Weather Handicaps Murray.

In justice to the champion, it must be said that the weather did not favor him. It was oppressively hot and humid and the clouds were overcast when the match was started.

Murray is never at his best in the open air, and as most of the play was done in the open air, he played well enough to beat almost any one but Johnston, who was playing a brand of tennis that it can be said, should bring him this year's title.

The fact that Johnston was not more enthusiastic than it was lay in the fact that each of the players is so great a favorite with followers of tennis that the crowd was not so much interested in the match as it was in the fact that each of the players is so great a favorite with followers of tennis.

In the first set Johnston scored 131 points. Of these he gained 42 on aces by placement, 4 on service aces and 84 on aces by placement. Tilden scored a total of 107 points. The champion made 42 aces by placement, 5 service aces and 60 on Johnston's errors.
